Dissident Russians Sent to Prison

Amalrik, dissident historian and penetrating critic of the Soviet system, was sentenced to three years in prison camp under restrictive regime at his trial in Sverdlovsk Thursday, dissident sources

His co-defendant, Lev Ubozhko, was sentenced to three years in camp under general regime.

There are four types of regime, in Soviet camps, General is the least severe and restrictive the next most severe, with two even three years under general regime for both defendants. The judge increased Amalrik's penzity, an unusual but not unheard-of occurrence in Soviet courts.

Both men were charged with "disseminating falsehoods derogatory to the Soviet state and social system." They did not know each other before. Ubozhko was charged with bringing two documents to Sverdlovsk. One that Amairik wrote to Anatoly Kuznetsov, the Soviet writer year; hence the link between the defendants. The other document was a leaflet distributed by two young Italians at a demonstration at the TSUM department store in January, demanding the liberation of Maj. Gen. Pyotr Grigorenko and other dissident heroes.

FIVE DOCUMENTS

The prosecution was reease against Amalrik on five ents: The open letter to tsov; "will the Soviet Union survive until 1984?" in gration of the Soviet empire in a war with China; "Involuntary journey to Siberia," in which he described an earlier exile as an "anti-social para-site," and two interviews for American television. None of these things has been pub-lished in the Soviet Union, but some are available through self-publishing.

The dissident sources said that Amairik spoke Thursday for one hour and Ubozhko for two hours, but no details were available. Sverdlovsk is 900 miles from Moscow.

Canada Takes Middle Road In China Debate

UNITED NATIONS (CP) - Canada said today it supports the admission of Communist China to the 127-member world organization as soon as it is clear that such a step is the wish of a "significant proportion of the membership."

The announcement was made in the General Assem-bly in a brief speech by Canadian Ambassador Yvon Beaulne that said little that could be considered as a sales bership.

Beaulne, speaking on the second day of the annual China debate, said Canadh will support the Albanian resolution calling for the admission of the Communist Chinese and expulsion of the Nationalists.

U.S. VIEW CHANGED Earlier the United States stole the thunder in the debate Thursday by coming close to advocating a two-China policy for the UN—the seating of both the Nationalists and the Communists.

A m b assador Christopher Phillips delivered a speech that contained not one word of criticism of the Communist Chinese and concentrated on the American claim that expulsion of Nationalist China would violate "the principles of equity and justice."

Instead of implying, as have past U.S. speeches in this annual debate, that the Communists are not ready for membership because of the Continued on Page 2

Bennett Hints

Higher Taxes In Next Year

By BRUCE YEMEN Times Staff

Vancouver - Premier Bennett today forewarned the province of "temporarily unpopular" measures to be introduced at the next legislative session.

It was the strongest indication to date that new or higher taxes — or both — will be imposed on B.C. residents.

Bennett told the party's annual convention at the Bayshore Inn that B.C. has weathered the most difficult year of the past two decades "surprisingly well,"

SISTERS BALK AT LAND SALE

By GERARD McNEIL

MONTREAL (CP) - The almost casual nature of the Pierre Laporte kidnapping was further illustrated Thursday as Lise Balcer, 21-yearold niece of a former federal cabinet minister, testified at an inquest into the slaying last month of the Quebec labor minister.

Miss Balcer, arrested under the War Measures Act Oct. 17 and charged last week with membership in the outlawed Front de Liberation du Que-bec, told the inquest how she helped rent the house where Mr. Laporte was held and later listened to the suspected kidnappers discuss an abduc-

The premier said British Columbia doctors this year have shown "great restraint in not asking for any increase in their rates" under the medicare plan.

The premier, introduced by Provincial Secretary Wesley Black as "the greatest politi-cal leader in Canada tody," indicated he has no plans to retire in the foreseeable future.

Bennett received two standing ovations from the dele-gates. The only platform guest to get a similar ovation was Vancouver Mayor Tom Campbell, who said the Social Credit government is going to be "the government of the future."

MARKET SLUMP

Bennett cited the anti-infla tion battle, a slumping world timber market, and a difficult year on the labor front as auses for current economic difficulties. But he said the "had strikes are behind us."

SOVIET

Prokofiev and other musical giants, He quoted from one: "Your atonal, disharmonious music is organically alien to the people ... formalist trickery arises when there is little talent, but many pre-tenses to innovation . . . we do not at all accept the music of Sho stakovich, Myaskovsky, Prokofiev."

Rostropovich continued.
"When you look at a paper from these years now, you feel intolerable shame for many things. For the fact that the opera 'Katerina Izmailova' was not performed for three decades, for the fact that Prokofiev did not survive to hear the last variation of his opera 'War and Peace' for the fact that there official lists of banned works by Shostakoich, Prok ofiev, Myaskovosky, Khachat urian."

The cellist asked if Soviet experience "has not taught us to be careful in crushing talented people? With making people make pronoucements about things which they have not read or heard?" He recalled with pride that he did not go to a meeting where Pasternak "was dishonored, where I was to have given a speech criticizing 'Dr. Zhi-vago,' which at that time I had not read.'

CLIMAX

Rostropovich sustained a climax in the letter as he does in his musical performances, through his four final paragraphs.

"I do not go into political or country. There are people who understand these things better than I do. But please explain to me: Why is it that in our literature and our art the decisive word so often belongs to people who are a b solutely incompetent in these fields? Where do they get the right to discredit our art in the eyes of our people?"

Observers said this was strong language for a polemic against the official view by someone who still officially belongs to the establishment.

"I stir up these old things not just to grumble," Ros-tropovich continued, "but so that we do not have, in 20 years, to feel shame when we look at today's newspapers

"Everyman must have the think and make statements openly about the things he knows, that he has thought about, that he has lived through," Rostropovich said, "to do this independent-ly and without fear, and not only to repeat weakly on that has been fed into Without doubt, we shall arrive at a free discussion where nobody will whisper behind our backs what we must say.

NOT AFRAID

"I know that there will be an OPINION about me too after this letter," Rostropo-vich continued, "but I am not afraid of it and I say openly what I think. Talents that comprise our pride must not be subjected to punishment in advance. I know many of Solzhenitsyn's works, I them, and I consider that he has suffered enough to deserve the right to write the reason to conceal my rela-tionship with him when there is a campaign against him."

Liberals to Decide Charter for '70s

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — An estimated 2,500 members of the Liberal party will gather in Ottawa weekend for a national conference to draft policy for the 1970s.

The conference will be the culmination of almost two years of work at the constit-uency level, at provincial party meetings, and at the Harrison Liberal Conference last November to fashion to complete policy paper for the Highlight of the three day meeting will be an "accountability session" with Prime Minister Trudeau in which he will be questioned by party members as to why the government has acted in certain ways.

Professor Allen Linden and Jacques Gerin, co-chairmen of the conference, told a news conference Thursday they expect the prime minister to come under heavy fire at the session.

PM Accountable

They said the leader of the party is absolutely accountable to its members, and a note will be taken at the leadership convention should be held within one year.

Although Trudeau will be under attack, the co-chairmen doubted that a leadership convention would be

"I think", Linden quipped "he should be able to hold the party together for another couple of months anyway."

Linden suggested a number of areas in which the prime minister may be criticized. These include economic nationalism versus free trade; the government's battle against inflation and serious unemployment situation; the pace of ernment reform in the fields of drug use and abortion; a guaranteed annual income and poverty control, and foreign relations.

Rough Time

"I expect the prime minister may be in for a pretty rough time," Linden said.
"There are a lot of Liberals, particularly the young ones, who just aren't pleased with the progress the government is making."

The co-chairmen pointed out that if sufficient delegates are displeased with a particu-lar Trudeau policy he can— and would— be publicly The 1970 conference marks the first time in the party's history that an accountability

Provisions for both were the 1970s and the government — or the opposition, if the written into the party consti-tution at its last policy convention in 1966.

Another new aspect of the conference is that delegates will be asked to approve of themselves as representatives of a "continuing convention."

Gerin and Linden said one of the great difficulties in the past had been encountered in trying to test grass roots sentiment on a national basis between conventions.

The president of the party association, and, naturally, the leader, is always available to make statements on behalf of the Liberals, but there is never any certainty they are reflecting party

Poll Delegates

The solution the co-chair-men have arrived at is to have the delegates at the Ottawa meeting return their homes but remain fully accredited convention repre-sentatives until the next policy session.

This way the national headquarters would always have a list of 2,500 Liberals who could be polled by telephone or telegram when an import-

Such a continuing convention, the two men added, would merely be a fore runner to a truly national convention in the future which would take place in five or six different cities simultaneously and be linked together by

could easily take place, While the party is still earthbound and subject to high transportation costs for delegates, however, the Ottawa meeting will have to do. It will be novel compared to previous policy conferences, though, in that a number of forums dealing with areas of concern will be held; resolutions will be drafted there; and then a form of near-computerized, preferential balloting will take

In order to be voted on by the convention as a whole, a resolution must receive 30 per cent support in a forum. The voting by all delegates then takes the form of "strongly agree; agree; not sure: disagree," and strongly disagree.

comings in the service of the CPR's Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway have been publicly exposed in the scathing judgment of the Canadian Transport Commission. The details are hardly news for the people of Vancouver Island, but the judgment comes as a welcome vindication of all the local efforts to get an improved service.

The company is ordered - and presumably will immediately comply - to restore its stations and other premises to clean and usable condition; keep them open on operating days; use adequate rolling stock to handle the traffic - which means no more sitting on benches in the baggage compartment; rearrange timetables so that departures and arrivals of the trains will have some relation to ship, air and other means of transportation; and generally run the railroad for the benefit of the public rather than as a token service apparently designed to prove that it was not necessary.

Restoration of this rail service on an adequate basis should prove to be a boon to many residents of the Island and visitors to it. The lack of patronage quoted by the company has been due mainly to the company's apparent efforts to make Island. It is about time.

> With scenery along the route described as some of the best in Canada, and thousands of railway buffs and tourists looking for something a little out of the ordinary in the way of holiday journeys, the CPR spent only $150 year on what the company claimed as advertising, but which turned out to be merely a timetable.

In the words of the commissioner: "The evidence . . . has convinced me that the E & N passenger trains between Victoria and Courtenay are being run without any real regard for the comfort and convenience of passengers . . ." The judgment suggests that an improvement in service will result in an increase in revenue which will make the line commercially feasible as well as popular. To get any attention from the commission the railway must show that the service is uneeded and unprofitable despite all efforts to make it successful. This has certainly not been done heretofore, but thanks to the commission's ruling we may now be in for a welcome period of railway service on Vancouver

Rescue Squad

IT IS NOT NEWS IN THE GREATer Victoria community for the annual United Appeal to have hard going, although the final total is usually comfortably close to the objective. What is unusual is for the business and industrial divisions to fall far behind their targets, for these are normally the mainstay of the whole campaign.

Admittedly this has not been a favorable year. The long strikes and other hazards of industry have exacted their toll of ready cash. But Greater Victoria can hardly be considered a disaster area either. Few firms, particularly sizable ones, can have suffered to the point where a reasonable contribution to argument.

the community's health, welfare, and recreation services becomes impossible. We read that the tourist influx this year brought $80 millions to local businesses. If this circulates throughout the community-as we are told it does by advocates of a tourist convention centre - then a portion of it ought to be available for the United Appeal services of

The annual campaign is now in its closing days. The benefits of a successful appeal provide good reasons for giving. The year-long adverse effects of an appeal that fails should be an even stronger

Aswan Ecology

ONE OF THE UNFORESEEN effects of the Aswan dam has brought distress to an element of the Egyptian population. Control of the river flow has reduced the harvest of fishermen on the Nile and in the Mediterranean area off its mouth.

Scientists explain that, in flood, the Nile brought down various nutrients which provided sustenance for plankton. Plankton, in turn, nourished the fish. Elimination of floods has eliminated the delivery of the nutrients.

There is, however, a possible compensating factor for this interference with established fisheries the water impounded in Lake Nasser by the dam could sustain larger fisheries than those of the Nile delta region.

In this era of surging technology, the prospect should create interest far beyond the banks of the Nile. If fisheries can be developed extensively in Lake Nasser, a significant step may be made there in the field of fish farming. That could be significant in other areas of the world - such as British Columbia - where thought is now being given to retention of even migrating fish, like salmon, in large bodies of impounded water.

ELECTION AFTERMATH

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

The Democrats' Quest-A Leader, Policy

A PART from his necessarily confident manner in public, what did President Nixon learn from the recent congressional election? How did he judge it in private? And how will he interpret it in actual policy from now on? These questions will soon be answered one one, since any president, unlike his opponents, makes policy day by day.

His every word and gesture, in bold advance or disguised retreat, color and change the whole political process. There is another question perhaps equally important but it will not be answered soon and cannot be answered at all without a long internal argument and family row among the president's enemies. What has the Democratic party learned from the election, apart from its public posture, and how will it go about the recapture of the presidency two years from now?

That question is important to Americans and foreigners alike not only because the Democratic party alone can offer any real alternative to Mr. Nixon in 1972 but because, in opposition, it has the leisure and may have the will to red assess its basic social attitudes toward rapidly changing society.

Two years ago, Hubert Humphrey came within a few votes of victory whi carrying the awful burden of President Johnson's record, his abdication and his Vietnam war. Today, though the Demo-cratic party is probably more split than its opponents, and financially broke, it has largely escaped the grim Johnso legacy, In the congressional election it made a fresh-start.

Disaster Avoided

To be sure, the start was not entirely successful and Mr. Nixon blandly insists that it was a failure. Yet, given the defeat of 1968, the internal schism, the financial shortage, the Republicans' ted campaign funds and the power of the presidency, the Democrats can claim anyhow that they avoided a disaster fatal fo their hopes for 1972. In short, they have won the chance to repair their political machinery and, far more important, to revise their ideas.

That, indeed, is one of the most imteresting questions left unanswered in the debris of the election — what ideas will the opposition generate and crystallize into policy for the next presidential contest? No one awaits the answer more eagerly, or with more subtle insight, than Mr. Nixon, a master of politics, whatever else he may be.

At least until the congressional poll Mr. Nixon's re-election two years from w had been widely assumed, almost taken for granted, mainly because no comparable figure had yet appeared in the opposition; also because American society seems to be moving in a generally conservative direction and he personified that movement.

But how anyone can foresee, in these times, what will happen to any man, party or nation two years ahead is difficult to imagine when all prediction is at the mercy of events quite unforeseeable and moving at supersonic speed. They have moved so fast, indeed, during recent months that Mr. Nixon suddenly decided, perhaps unwisely, to reverse his entire strategy and, instead of cooling the nation to heat it, instead of lowering the voices of controversy to raise them If, as a result of this reversal, his future policies and strategy are uncertain, however calm and commanding he may appear, his opponents live in an even more confused state. With all his tactical shifts, advances and retreats, he has a definite, settled conservative philosophy, insofar as a president can afford to have one. Moreover, by his office, he controls his party; despite its rebels, and no one in it seriously challenges his leadership. The Demo crats, on the other hand, have neither a philosophy nor a leader and are desperately searching for both.

nied with indignation by any practising Democratic politician. He will say, quite rightly, that a philosophical doctrine of sorts has animated his party since Thomas Jefferson founded it nearly two. centuries ago. Yes, but this is a semantic dispute only. For what should Jefferson's democracy mean in an age that he could not recognize?

If the Democrats can claim a vague miscellany of historic principles, or impulses, and call them "liberalism" they do not provide a philosophy or, at rate, an understandable policy sufficient for current needs or for the purpose of unseating Mr. Nixon.

To put an infinitely complex problem a crude capsule, the Democratic party, split between right and left, North and South, liberals and conservatives must use the next two years to clarify its thoughts if the American people are to accept them - unless, of course, the president conveniently destroys himself, as Lyndon Johnson did.

Anyone who has talked with the elected, practical politicians of the party and with the non-elected, almost anonymous philosophers will see at once the vast gap between them. The politicians are interested primarily in winning the next election, which is their business. The philosophers are interested in winning the party over not to a new philosophy ting a new society and understandable to a deeply perplexed nation.

The politicians, always sceptical of the intellectuals and always glad to use them for attractive window dressing, realize that the party is bucking a conservative tide, with its label of law and order. It is all very well, the politicians say, to dream big dreams about the still unknown future society, but what about the votes of 1972? And what about the powerful conservatives who still dominate large sectors of the ostensibly liberal opposition?

As against these short-term calculations, the philosophers demand a daring long-term strategy of reform whether it is acceptable in 1972 or not. For then or later, they say, the Democratic party will have to provide a liberal policy and a clear alternative to Republican conservatism, as Franklin Roosevelt provided an alternative to Herbert Hoover.

Thus, while Mr. Nixon may know what he is doing (and, in any case, can change direction overnight as required), opponents do not. But they cannot afford remain long in such an equivocal position. They are bound now to sort out their doctrines, theories and actual policies, as well as their personalities, if they are to beat the president. So far, they have hardly begun to face this daunting task.

Complex Issue

The recent remarks by Mr. David Anderson (MP for Esquimalt-Saanich) on the taxation of church property raises an issue which is complex and deserving of careful study. One wonders, however whether Mr. Anderson is disposed to objective examination.

He has apparently overlooked two basic facts. Ironically The United Church of Canada was actually withdrawing from commercial activity with the sale of Ryerson Press. Had the Church purchased a commercial publishing company his remarks might have been more timely. More important, as Mr Anderson should well know, churchowned property which is being used for commercial purposes is already subject to normal commercial taxation.

Mr. Anderson's judgment is also to be questioned in his suggestion that the sale of church property which is still being used for religious purposes (e.g. Timothy Eaton Memorial Church in Toronto) would aid the needy. This is similar to suggesting that the sale of libraries schools and sports stadiums would provide great sums of money for the needy. Of course it would but what would be the lasting effect on society? To take the argument even further, great sums of money would be available for the needy if all government offices were closed and all parliamentary salaries discontinued. But how then could government function?

Perhaps Mr. Anderson's bias is most obvious in his vicious charge about the Church's involvement in Biafran Relief. To state that the Church did nothing beyond expecting the general public to make contributions to this project is irresponsible. The bulk of aid contributed to Biafran Relief came from individual Church people, including executive per-

Studying the Part of Liquor in Crime

THE attorney general of Alberta, the Hon, Edgar Gerhart, was thinking out loud about crime and crime statistics last week and wondering whether there wasn't a lot of what he called "pseudo being reflected in statistics. If there is, the Al-Government may try a new method to bend back upward crime curve. It is consider ing taking a number offences off the statute books. Mr. Gerhart has his eye on the Liquor Act in particular. If all the liquor and drug offenders were turned loose, the jails of Alberta would be half empty. As it is they are jammed to the rafters.

To ease the congestion, the government two years ago decided to stop jailing simple drunks. It gave the local police the option of charging or not charging the drunks they arrested. Those not charged were allowed to sober up overnight and were turned loose in the not only as trouble for nothing, but a "heads I win, tails you lose" proposition. They had all the work of making arrests of either cost. Where fines were paid, there was a division of the money between the two administrations.

To overcome this objection, the province agreed to pay $5 a night for the lodging of overnight drunks. Now the government is wondering whether there is any point in making these arrests, and other minor liquor offences as well.

Among the provisions which the government is considering repealing are those dealing with illegal possession of liquor. These would include teenagers caught with liquor in parked cars, underaged possession, having liquor in unlicensed premises

It is under this section that drunkenness at football games, which is a serious problem only in Edmonton, is kept in check, Mr. Gerhart thinks football's drunks could be handled under other sections of the criminal law.

The objection to the booze-based statutes is twofold enforcement by the police departments At first the local police regarded this and the cost of imposition of penalties. A charge of illegal possession usually carries the penalty of $20 and costs or 10 days in jail. This option was devised in and the expense of maintaining the the dim past when $2 was regarded as a drunk tank and the province paid no part fair day's wage. Now when the jail option is taken it is unfair to both the taxpavers and the offenders.

As Mr. Gerhart points out, it costs $9 a day to keep a prisoner in jail. So every time a drunk does time it costs the government $90 in cash. Simple arithmetic would indicate that at very least the time in custody should to cut to two days

But is the whole exercise worth the effort? Would the government not be better off to say the hell with it and repeal all the minor sections of the Liquor Act? That in fact is what the government is considering, and doing so in realization that even this cure may prove worse than the disease.

Accidents Increasing

Traffic accidents where liquor is involved are increasing sharply every year. Are not stiffer penalties for mixing liquor and gasoline needed rather than repeal of the laws against possessing liquor in cars? The government is ndering whether more stringent laws against drunken driving should not go along with repeal of illegal possession.

The unhappy truth seems to be, however, that increased penalties have not reduced drunken driving. Fines of $200, $300 and $400 are now being imposed along with license suspension. But more charges are being laid all the time.

It was reported A veteran traffic policeman said yesterday that the recently however that drunken driving family of Count Leo statistics don't tell half the story, He Toistoi, distraught guessed that a good quarter of the collisions which took place involved a at the disappeardriver who had been drinking but was ance of the famous not drunk enough to be charged. The minor liquor sections are simply the whole world of criminal law in miniature. Everything that can be said about the financial burden entailed in keeping drunks locked up for short terms applies to offenders jammed into penitentiaries for serious crimes. It costs many times as much to keep them in prison as to have them at large on welfare. Is there any more logic for sentences of 10 years versus two years than for 10 days versus two days?

Maybe Mr. Gerhart will get around to worrying about that one when the results are in from whatever experiment he decides to embark on in the repeal of minor sections of the Liquor Act.

The unconstrained future will see three vast and nation-dominating urban enclaves 30

They will be Toronto with a population of six and half million, Montreal with a population of six and a quarter million, and Vancouver with a population of about two and a half million.

Other Canadian cities will double in size, although their positions in relation to the three major centres may grow weaker.

Montreal-Toronto Corridor Has 40 Per Cent of People

Even today, the so-called Montreal-Toronto corridor is a nation dominating entity. Already it has 40 per cent of the Canadian population,

Two-thirds of all cheques cashed are cleared through those two cities, 75 per cent of all head office corporate assets are in them, and nearly 90 per cent of head office assets of financial institutions is to be found there. For instance, each week at least 50,000 people move by railway, road or air between Montreal and Toronto. I think that hon, members will not need to be reminded of more to suggest the national economic and political possibilities if this area extends its position of power in next 30 years. It may be a wise option, but I think we would all wish to dwell upon it.

To get back to some specific problems, let me point out that the housing demand over the next 30 years of unconstrained future would be more than four million units for the three cities of Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver. There would be three million automobiles in Montreal alone, or in Toronto, by the year 2000. The next ten years will be the crunch period. The evidence of this is there. The postwar baby boom children are having families, with resulting pressures growing on family type dwelling in a trend that is emerging counter to the high-rise building of recent years.

(Other factors are immigrants, 75 per cent of whom now come to Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver, and internal migration from rural to urban centres, and from small urban to big urban centres,

The ever sharpening demand for scarce urban space that is created by this population growth sets up an interconnected series of causes and effects which we have to learn to understand if we are going to cope,

The Next Ten Years Is the Crunch Period'

How many hon, members will not already recognize to some extent this scenario, where land becomes so expensive as to preclude all but extremely dense residential downtown living; families with children seeking single family dwellings will have to commute several hours each day; downtown areas becoming congested, polluted and noisy; higher taxes and yet higher land costs as suburbs sprawl further; industries fleeing to suburbs leaving the poor without access, to jobs that they can afford, and the inner city without a necessary tax base; steady existing of stable neighborders. steady erosion of stable neighborhoods; economic uncertainty facing core dwellers; deterioration in the quality of their environment; creation of an increasingly explosive situation when people feel cheated and when they despair; increased segregation of economic classes with its resulting divisiveness in the community and between communities at a time when unity is this country's great need?

What really happens as a result of all this, is that everyone's choice is diminished. The aged and the handicapped and the otherwise unemployable, who are the great bulk of the nation's poor, are trapped either in shameful housing in core slums or located unreasonably far out from the active life of the city that gives them interest. Frankly, I do not know where the trade-off in all of this is. I do not know, and nobody. I have talked to can tell me when the exact point is reached that a city is simply too big.

I certainly do not propose what can or should be done to control city sizes. I have not computed all the national, social, economic or political implications. I do not have any hard alternatives or any preconceptions at this any hard alternatives or any preconceptions at this

At this point, this government and I see only some of the more evident problems, and they are enough to make us wish to co-operate with other levels of government to try to understand this process we are caught in, and to it to help fashion the kind of Canadian environmen that Canadians want.

For there is another side to all these negative things that can happen, and that is the opportunity to direct and create living environments in the manner that we want, fashioning progress to our social ends rather than being

Satellite Towns Seem Like Best Solution

What architect Frank L. Hope Jr. calls "Earth City" I would call "cop-out city." His proposal only evades the task of cleaning up the mess we have made of urban America by messing up "The plains of eastern Oregon, the highlands of northern New Mexico and the rolling green country of central Wisconsin" as well.

The idea of building huge instant cities in the wilderness has become quite fashionable lately. People are fascinated by artist-architect Paolo Soleri's "arcologies," for instance. Shown in various museums, these fantastic sculptures de pict modern Towers of Babel, three miles high, where three million people are to live with a view of an unpolluted ecology.

Buckminster Fuller, along with a number of other distinguished people, is work-ing on plans for an experi-mental city in Minnesota that is dear to former viceesident Hubert Humphrey's

But the present vice-president, Spiro T. Agnew, also welcomes such an "en-gagement with the future," or so says in his introduction to "The New City." The report of the national committee of respectable politicians, including governors, senators, con-gressmen and mayors, rec-ommends "the creation of 100 new communities averaging 100,000 population each and 10 communities of at least one million population."

Rubbery Word

The rubbery word "com-nunity" fails to make an munity" fails to make an important distinction which Hope makes when he advocales "new cities" but dis-

The terms have been utterly confused by the promoters, starting way back on the old frontier where they would advertise any two ing post as "a city." And now that Reston, Va., and Colum bia, Md., have met with public acclaim, the promoters put a swimming pool and a convenience store into their subdivision and call it if not a "new city," at least a Well, according to Webster, a city is "any important town." What makes it important, according to Hope, is "a critical mass of people" — critical enough "to attract and support the arts and the

Within Orbit

That, I would judge, takes at least half a million people. Any place smaller than that would be proud to call itself a "town" (it is a much more endearing term, anyway). A "new town," as Webster defines the ones in Britain, is designed to accommodate at least 20,000 people with "a planned ordering of residential, industrial and commer-ical development." It is also within the orbit of a large existing city and should there-fore be called a "satellite town. Americans, or at least American intellectuals, used to hate cities. But lately there is a new, somewhat abstract and usually rather romantic fervor about urban life, espe-cially among the young, as well as among architects, like Hope, and people who write about cities like me.

But even with the help of the kids, romantic architects and writers, I have not been able to stop the flight from the American city.

Most of them are losing population. The population increase is taking place in suburbia, especially in the suburban areas along the Atlantic, Pacific and Great Lakes shores

These are what the British call "conurbations" (spreading cities that are sort of fusing together), a phenomenon that the French g rapher Jean Gottmann "megalopolis," and they offer a greater variety of better jobs and better educational and cultural opportuni-ties than the less urbanized areas, so they keep attracting more and more people

And since ever more people settle in these areas, the variety and the economic, educational and cultural op portunities keep improving even more.

It will be very hard to start this up ward spiral from scratch somewhere out in the plains or hills, as Hope roposes. He is right, of course, that manufacturing need no longer be located on the waterfront. But manufacturing is dent on labor and labor is people and how are you going to get them to move out to the sticks?

There is no sense in build-ing school and movies before you are sure there are going to be people to fill them. But now here is the rub there aren't really very many people in manufacturing any more. The predominant and still growing number of jobs is in the service industries. And services, of course, depend on a high concentration f people. So how is Hope going to get his "critical mass?" With enough cash on hand he may persuade some hearty souls to ome and build his "earth and stick it out until his ball park and symphony hall are ready to open. It will take a long time, though. And he won't be able to persuade very many. The days of the pioneer are over.

Neglect Costly

Meanwhile, we must do something about the big cities and their sprawling suburbs and the deterioration of both That is not a matter of liking cities or hating cities or believing there is an urban crisis or poohpooing the urban

Mount Everest, they are there. You must do something about them. Even to neglect them further is action — though very expensive and possibly explosive action.

The first thing we ought to do about them is to forget the notion that megalopolis is "overcrowded," that there is no more space for all the people who want to live there.

That's nonsense. As Bucky Fuller keeps saying, you can put the whole world population on the Island of Man-hattan and there would still be enough room to dance the twist. If you don't want to dance the twist, you can efficiently organize the space or, as Hope puts it, "restruc-ture our existing growth."

One way to start doing that is to build new towns or satellite towns around rapid transit stops right in megalo-polis where you don't need any rugged pioneers but where people are within a 20-minute high-speed ride of existing universities, research centres, libraries, symphony halls, stadiums, delicatessen stores and any kind of action civilization comes

The satellite towns are part of a new system of cities, and to build that system is a tall order, too. But we have to anyway — money for housing, for roads, rails, schools and all the rest. And we might as well spend it efficiently and so as to save the tremendous investment we made in our cities over the past three

By HILTON KRAMER

Is the age of the "work of art" drawing to a close? Are we approaching a time when discrete, individual objects paintings, sculptures, drawings and their various hybrids and amalgams—will no longer command our esthetic inter-

Indeed, has the time al-ready arrived when we feel a little distant from — perhaps even a little superior to these niggling, highly indi-vidualistic efforts to achieve some personal statement, some personal form for ideas and emotions that would other-wise go unstated?

Are we already, perhaps, a little fed up with the artist as an individual, harboring his own special feelings, ardu-ously defining and refining the materials of his craft and bending them to the purposes of his own inner vision? You would certainly think so if you really believed a good deal of the talk among many spokesmen for the arts - museum personnel, critics, cultural ideologues, art historians, and even some artists

Nowadays it is not from the traditional enemies of art — the entrenched, know - nothing philistines, with their idiotic pieties about some imaginary golden age — that we hear the death sentence being passed on the discrete work of art, but from the very exponents of art itself. This impatience with art in its traditional forms derives from two principal sources. The first is technology, or rather, the Faustian promise that surrounds all those advances in technology which have already effected substantial changes in our practical afficiency. tical affairs,

How small, how piecemeal, how pitiable in its individual contingency the application of a dab of pigment to the surface of a canvas must seem to a mind that — in fantasy at least — has already harnessed these vast new energies and resources to some overhwelming esthetic objective!

Technology promises the artist a kind of power — or at least a delusion of power — heretofore unknown to the esthetic enterprise,

By comparison, the prospect of retiring to one's studio to take up the brush in a lonely search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be searched to the search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be searched to the search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be searched to the search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be searched to the search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be searched to the search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be searched to the search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be search for some limited realization in an already familiar readium would be search for some limited realization in a search f ready familiar medium would seem, for minds set ablaze by the Faustian promises of technology, a virtual confes-sion of powerlessness. Then there is that other temptation to exercise power — politics itself. The many ways in which political con-siderations have begun to affect our thinking about art even, in some cases, our actual response to art — is a large subject that I'shall not attempt to explore here,

I want only to point out that any pressure to judge work of by political standards inevitably results in diminishing our sense of its inviola-bility and individuality.

To impose political criteria on a work of art is to devalue it as a discreet and dis-interested esthetic object, and thus opens the way for transforming the work of art into a mere counter in a game of power.
Far from finding this pros-

Far from finding this prospect distasteful, many spokesmen for the arts seem suddenly to welcome it. The "work of art" as we have formerly known it—so this line of thinking goes—belongs to the old bourgeois epoch, with all its unearned and outmoded privileges and discriminations; a new conception of society will require a new conception of art, less individualistic, less precious, individualistic, less precious, and more concerned to serve some large, common social

But this impatience with the "work of art" also derives from yet another source — from one of the central paradoxes of modern art itself.

For one of the ambitions of coloridate art at least since

modernist art, at least since the advent of Futurism and Dada, has been to create a mode of expression that would somehow reach "beyond" art. The entire ideology of the Dada movement was concerned to stake a claim in this mysterious terrain where artistic expression transcended "more" art w ithout actually

But history, especially art market history, has shown conclusively that "anti-art" is, after all, only another species of art, and even the most myopic ideologues have — albeit reluctantly — had to face the fact that the aspiraface the fact that the aspira-tion they cherish requires the actual liquidation of the "work of art," even those works of art that offer themselves as "anti-art." And they naturally find in both the new technology and the new politics— and especially in their combination— an ideal means for carry.

- an ideal means for carrying out this liquidation.

They seem to sense -correctly, I think - that this magic combination of new forces might permit them at last to relieve their long-last to relieve their long-standing frustration.

Those of us who continue to cherish the "work of art" camot help finding this prospect more than a little bleak, but there is, I think, one comfort in this situation.

If the "work of art" is to be consigned to oblivion by those who have joined forces with the brokers of power, then it will simply return to the home that nourished it formuch of its history in modern times — the cultural under-- the cultural under-

Modern art managed the first time around to withstand the powerful attacks of the official custodians of culture, and it may now be called upon to do so again, If, that is, it is to survive at all.

Plan Bylaws To Control Development

DUNCAN — Cowichan Val-ley regional board is considering three bylaws to control development in the Cowichan Bay and Cobble Hill areas.

Directors said Thursday the bylaws, which were devised after a planning study carried out by planner John Northey, the regional board and planning commissions in the affected areas, will deal with zoning subdivision and development control and building.
Public hearings will be held to outline the proposed plan-ning bylaws which were re-quested by many residents. Director Bruce Devitt from Glenora, who requested a similar planning study, was advised that the Cobble Hill-Cowichan Bay study would be applicable in many instances in his area. The board wants to see more unorganized areas with in the regional district ask for similar studies.

Director H. A. Warner of Mill Bay said that the people of his district should have a chance to look at copies of the proposed bylaws before any decision is made.

Acting chairman Ken Mc-Kinnon of Cowichan Bay replied that making decisions was one of the jobs expected of regional directors.

Although Mill Bay is not directly affected by the plan-ning, all directors will have to vote on the three bylaws. Public hearings will be held to outline the planning.

McKinnon also announced his resignation as regional director due to health is on a tour of Canada and the U.S. He was accompanied by Duane Johnson and John Schlin-

Trudeau, Then Nixon On Heath Itinerary

LONDON (CP) - Prime Minister Heath will with Prime Minister Trudeau in Ottawa Dec. 16 and will then fly to Washington for fwo days of talks with President Nixon, it was announced today.

The fact that Heath will go to Ottawa first may be heartening to Canadian officials. At times in the past there had been grumblings that British leaders tended to bypass Ottawa making only perfunctory stops there on the way home from Washington meetings.

NOT GOING

Foregin Secretary Sir Alex Douglas-Home will join Heath in his Dec. 17-18 discussion with Nixon but will not make the trip to Ottawa, the announcement said.

This will be Heath's first meeting with Trudeau since the British leader took office last June and a long list of issues is likely to be discussed, informants said.

Among these are likely to be Britain's proposed decision to sell arms to South Africa, the threat to the Common wealth's future, the Singapore conference of prime ministers to take place in January, the problems affecting Western security including Soviet expansion and number of trade and other problems affecting British-Canadian relations. WILL DISCUSS CROSS

Undoubtedly another sub-ject will be developments in connection with Canada's internal security, particularly in relation to the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Heath is likely to echo the view of Sir Alec Douglas-Home, the British foregin ecretary, that Britain and Canada must work together within the Commonwealth to encourage peaceful change inside and outside the Commonwealth

Socred Women

Want Strict Welfare Rules

By BRUCE YEMEN Times Staff

VANCOUVER - A resolution proposing a hard line on welfare applicants drew enthusiastic applause from the Social Credit Party's Women's Auxiliary Thursday in an apparent foreshadowing of the mood of the full party convention opening

Several resolutions on the convention order paper suggest tougher residency requirements, "work-for-welfare" conditions and specific support for Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi's "good

The auxiliary, about 140-strong, produced only one dissenting vote on the resolution to require six months' residence as a condition of welfare eligibility.

It would also require a fixed address and proof of "genuine destitution" from able-bodied persons seeking welfare.

The women, who elected Mrs. Vera Pipes, Victoria real estate woman, as their new president, tabled a resolution calling for establishment of youth hostels by the provincial government. Delegates decided they weren't sure such hostels should be a provincial government responsibility.

The auxiliary also supported resolutions calling on the province to reinstate chiropractic para-medical care protection under the medicare plan to its former level, but agreed that members should write to Ottawa urging federal cost-sharing of the expense. B.C. cut the allowed para-medical coverage by about 50 per cent earlier this year. coverage by about 50 per cent earlier this year.

The women passed a resolution which called for "no more relaxation of provincial liquor laws." It noted that "many of our young people are going to ruin" as a result of the lowering of the drinking age to 19 this year.

Also supported was a resolution asking that the use of "insulting or abusive language to a police officer" be an offence, punishable on summary conviction under the Criminal Code of

The full party convention which began this morning and winds up Saturday night at the Bayshore Inn was to hear Alberta Premier Harry Strom Saturday afternoon. Other featured speakers besides Premier Bennett are Resources Minister Ray Williston and Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan.

Resolutions facing the convention range from those urging the provincial government to go into the car insurance and life insurance business to one from Kamloops proposing a complete ban on strikes and lockouts because "the present media-tion commission has not been successful in dealing with these problems."

50 YEARS OF DEDICATION

Year-Round Watch Over Graves

the Empire. Behind this Remembrance Day gesture, there's a story that few in this city know. It that Victoria Municipal is that Victoria Municipal Chapter has been caring for and placing flowers and wreaths on soldiers' graves surrounding the Cross of Sacrifice in the southeast corner of Ross Bay cemetery for more than 50 years.

Carefully preserved in a long-ago minute book of the chapter is the record of a special meeting on February 14, 1917, at which Mrs. A. F. (Fannie) Griffiths presided as regent annd the secretary was Mrs. David (Jean) Miller.

It was called express purpose of discussing the advisability of caring for "scattered and neglected"

Gromyko Meets Pope

ROME (Reuter) — Sovie Foreign Minister Andrei Gro myko paid an unannounced call on Pope Paul in the Vatican Thursday after ending talks on world problems with Italian Foreign Minister Aldo Moro.

The Soviet minister last met the Pope during a visit to Italy in 1966.

The meeting with the Pope was not announced in advance for security reasons, the Vatican said-

At today's third meeting be-ween the Soviet and Italian foreign ministers, both sides agreed on the need to revive the Middle East peace mission under United Nations envoy Gunnar V. Jarring and to imple-ment the 1967 Security Council resolution on the Middle Feet resolution on the Middle East.

A small government grant was received through the militias department. The cemetery caretaker was offered a small stipend for his assistance. But the IODE took full responsibility for the actual care.

Three years later (in 1920) through the Comrades of the Great War Association and the IODE, headstones replaced simple wooden crosses that marked each grave, About athe same time the government of Canada erected the Cross of Sacrifice. Due to soil condition in the cemetery the headstones soon started to sink, some as much as a foot. So Municipal Chapter assumed cost of repairs, at first by filling in the soil and raising the stones and latterly by placing almost all of them on concrete slabs.

After the Cross of Sacrifice was erected and a naval memorial tablet was placed nearby, primary chatpers of the IODE from whom money goes to Municipal Chapter

Centennials Cautiously Confident of Tourney Chances

Well-wishes of a nation will go with Victoria Centennials when Canada's champions leave Saturday morning for Cartagena, Colombia, and the world amateur baseball

And they're leaving with a pride that stems from a realization that the Centennials will be the first team ever to represent Canada in the world championship series.

"We'll probably be looked upon as a bunch of little old tea drinkers," said coach Keith Todd, "but I think we're capable of making a good showing."

Eleven other countries are entered in the tournament competing are the United States, Cuba, The Netherlands, Italy, Mexico, Domincan Republic, Dutch Antilles, Colombia, which starts next Wednesday and winds up Dec. 1, Also Venezuela, Panama and Puerto Rico.

VALKER

Another thoroughbred racing season at Sandown Park is history, and probably a bigger bite of history than many qualified observers at first believed possible.

For it is no secret, even now, that few thought the 15-day meeting, which ended with the Vancouver Island championship n Wednesday, would reach its scheduled conclusion. B.C. ockey Club officials may be excused for saying otherwise if they choose, but it so.

And the fact that the meeting ran its course is a tribute to the valiant few owners and trainers and their trusty steeds who braved the Sandown flats. For those who didn't come, shame.

Actually the meeting had very few things going for it when

It was only scheduled because of pressure from the Island, and the fact that it was held as late as it was put the situation in its proper perspective. Sandown was the end of the line. Which it is, probably, because the original long list of horses scheduled to appear dwindled for a variety of reasons and many owners declined to ship over, feeling perhaps that if the rains came it would be a lost cause anyway.

Not that they could be blamed, really, for the place would have been a quagmire.

As it was, the weather was the most remarkable aspect of the meeting. The sun shone through the overcast most of the racing days, and it is probably a good thing it did. Otherwise there would have been a general exodus.

The weekend crowds, in particular, were a healthy indication that Victoria does like its horse racing, even if not in the general support that B.C. Jockey Club officials were hoping

B.C. Jockey Club president Jack Diamond said at one time that an average handle of $110,000 a day would be considered Successful. In that regard Sandown failed by $15,000. Diamond also said that with an average of $150,000 a day, modernization of the plant would be considered possible. Naturally, Sandown failed there, too. But by the same token the average handle of $95,261 must be considered satisfactory from an Island

Because after all it was awfully late in the year, and the same horses kept running back almost every second day. And the only factor that saved that end of the meeting was that they were all about on a par; which made for interesting and contentious cards.

It must be said, too, that the quality of the three-year-olds the grounds was good, and so were the handicap performers. This is particularly so of Charlie Cheri, and it must be considered rather unious to have had the Premier's B.C. championship winner competing at Sandown, of all places, and trainer Bill Lochead should be commended for his interest.

And the Victoria fans did their part, too.—
"Better than expected" was the word used by Jockey Club

officials, which means that they had never considered reaching torget figure. "But still not good enough" is what they really think of Sandown, or as presiding steward Merv Peters said: "We will have to analyze the situation before a decision is made for next year."

Which is understandable, considering the economics of the over-all operation. The Vancouver season now runs 104 days, and obviously makes a profit, as does the provincial government. No other sport contributes to the government coffers, so it is unlikely that any changes in scheduling would be suggested, or, even considered,

Sandown's only answer is that in 1967, the last fall meeting beginning in September, the daily handle averaged $116,000 which is considered adequate, and was almost the same as was averaged in 1966

Diamond still would like to run here in the spring, but Victorians, and the horse owners, indicated conclusively spring of '68 and again in '69 that they wouldn't support this type of program. The fact that the current Ex-Park program runs into mid-October appears to rule out a return to the former Victoria dates of mid-September to mid-October. Besides, Calgary runs into September now, Playfair opens at

Spokane, and the better horses can always go south to Bay Meadows or other California tracks, Which leaves Sandown right back where it started when this meeting began. At the end of the totem pole.

That is, unless you consider the combined quarter-horse thoroughbred meeting in mid-summer as a replacement

But that's another story, and not too far fetched at that.

Steelhead Hit Island Rivers

By STEWART LANG

Local salmon fishermen might as well confine their activities this weekend too waters around Greater Victoria - that's where most of the action seems to centre for Vancouver Island.

Springs up to 16 pounds have been caught in Saanich Inlet during the past week from Tod Inlet to Willis Point, around the corner to The Boulder as well as near McCurdy Point and Goldstream Island.

Fishermen working out of Deep Cove are picking up jack springs and large grilse near Moses Point and the Deep Cove narker. Others have been striking it lucky on the opposite side, Oak Bay regulars are finding early morning and evening hours the most productive times for winter springs up to 19 pounds along with a few coho.

Best catches have been recorded around Fulford Reef, Fiddle Reef light, the "golf links" shore and out on Constance Banks, using around 100 feet of line and six to eight ounces of weight.

Pedder Bay, Beechey Head and Secretary Island waters are yielding winter springs to 22 pounds.

Cowichan Bay and Sansum Narrows are also producing a few springs and coho while winter springs are being boated off Nanaimo, Duncan Bay, Frenchman's Pool and Quathiaski Cove.

On the freshwater side of things, a few steelhead are starting to ascend Island streams with the salmon and have been caught in the Cowichan, Nanaimo, Stamp and Campbell been caught in the Cowichan, Nanaimo, Stamp and Campbell rivers, Best check with the local conservation officer, however.

Most streams and a few of the smaller lakes are swollen from the recent rains and as such are barely fishable.

However, trout catches of note were taken during the past week from Shawnigan, Dougan's, Quamichan, Somenos, Sproat, Comox Willemar and Comphell lakes.

OUTDOOR SCENE

By Barry M. Thornton

Hunting the Wolf Lake near Courtenay last weekend, I learned one more valuable lesson for outfoxing the Island blacktail deer.

Moving through second-growth fir trees with knee-high, crisp salal underfoot, I had paused at the edge of a small alder marsh when I heard a deer moving through the salal.

For the next 20 minutes it was a constant battle of nerves as I attempted to stalk quietly through the high salal, pausing every few steps and jumping the deer every hundred feet or so. I managed one quick shot as he headed into even thicker firs on the next slope but was unsuccessful. I moved to the spot from where he had dashed when I shot, in case I had made a hit, but there was no sign.

hit, but there was no sign.

At that moment, my partner whistled from the next ridge.

I pursed my lips to return the whistle but found I was unable to do so, I blew, puckered and sputtered for at least five minutes, making all forms of squeeks and squeats until finally I was able to return his whistle. While blowing I had continued following the deer's trail through the centre of a very heavy set of fir boughs.

Looking up the ridge at this point I was startled to see a prime, three-point swamp buck standing on the other side of the tree. I had all the time I wanted and he dropped with a neck shot. He had appeared completely unconcerned although yery intrigued by all the ruckus I had been making.

The lesson, and it was well enforced, pointed out the fallibility of the blacktail. They are insatiably curious. Anything out of the norm that doesn't appear to harbor danger will be investigated, providing it is not out of the way. Hunters can capitalize on this increased curiosity of bucks during this season of the year when the rut is on. Whether the swamp buck I shot wondered if I was a following doe or another buck invading his territory is questionable. But it is certain that he felt I was one of the two possibilities. Two weeks ago there wold have been no curiosity. At the first noise from my approach he would have been gone for quieter

Blacktail trophy hunters have limited success on Vancouver Island. A few large 200-pounders are taken from the Cowichan and Nimkish Valleys. Trophy hunters would do well to remember that during the rut should they see a lone travelling doe, an attentive buck will often be only a few yards Outdoors associations that sponsor junior clubs will greet with enthusiasm the recent development of a fly casting kit for indoor instruction, marketed by the Garcia Corporation.

This teaching device permits a beginner to learn the basics of fly casting and the art of false casting. The fly fisherman false casts to extend line, shake water from a dry fly and to change direction of a cast. False casting is by far the most critical aspect of successful fly fishing.

For juniors this kit is ideal. By alleviating the necessity of instruction on stream or lake, youngsters will acquire the basics for a successful first outdoor excursion.

Quebec Asked To Stem Traffic

Montreal Urban Community council decided Thursday night to ask the Quebec government for the power to restrict vehicu-lar traffic under certain circum-stances to combat air pollution.

The council agreed unani-mously to ask the provincial government to amend the High-way Code to allow local authori-ties to prohibit or restrict cer-tain forms of vehicular traffic when air pollution reaches a level threatening public health.

Lucien Saulnier, chairman of the MUC executive committee, said prohibiting or reducing au-tomobile traffic is the most effective way of reducing air pollution in a given size. pollution in a given area.

The council also adopted two sets of conditions establishing

Datsun Canada's 1970 rally champion

We won the title in 1967. We won the title in 1969. And this year we won the title again with ten of our cars in the top twelve positions and more points than all other manufacturers combined.

We didn't enter just for glory. We did it to see what Datsun could do under extreme driving conditions. We did it to test our car on the worst possible roads against the best possible competition. We did it to make sure Datsun delivers superb performance, ironclad durability, easy handling and good mileage. And we did it in more countries than Canada.

This year we came first, second, and fourth in the East African Safari Rally. Nine out of nineteen cars to finish were ours.

We won the 10,000 mile Around Australia Rally. And we won our class in the last Shell 4000.

now do you believe we have a winner?

Battling Bessie' Dies at 71

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Battling Bessie Braddock, the 200-pound "heavyweight cham-pion of British politics," died today after a long illness. She was 71.

The lifelong fighter for the working man retired from the House of Commons last June after representing a Liverpool district since 1945. She joined the Labor party in 1918 and was a member of its national execu-tive for 22 years.

Down and Across With the Addicts

By Jack Scott-

It's not that I'm disloyal, you understand, but I was secretly delighted by the results of the massive foul-up of last weekend's giant crossword puzzle in the paper, a boo-boo of such magnitude that I spent almost an entire Sunday on it, convinced that it was a diabolical new test of our

What pleased me was the tremendous response of readers and, checking this with our circulation manager, Stewart Kidd, I was astonished to find that the last survey showed one in every three Times' subscribers was a "regular" or "occasional" addict, a figure that, on a per capita basis, might well make Victoria the Crossword Puzzle Capital of the world.

This gives me yet another comforting feeling of identity with my adopted town since I've been a slave, esne or Helot (Spartan) to crosswords for many long years.

I first became hooked on them as a correspondent in Britain when we took a place on the Thames, a 40-minute train trip to my office in London. The rain trip to my office in London. The notion then occurred to me that I might make myself the best informed man in Buckinghamshire by reading The Times from front to back during my commuting. If I'd succeeded, of course, I'd have been a very wise man. Indeed, I'd have been a sage, solon, nestor, a veritable Magi, Gaspar, Balthasar or Witan. Trouble was, I'd never been accus tomed to getting up so early in the morning and, arriving at the station in Datchet for the 7.28 I was usually in the sort of torpor associated with the Ai, the three-toed sloth, or even the Unau, the two-toed sloth, The other commuters, most of them City businessmen Xeroxed under black bowlers, were no more lively and gave every appearance of having just emerged from Aala, the Egyptian abode of the dead. True to the British railway tradition, there was no more direct communication between the passengers than would have been expected had our mother tongues been Geg, Cham, Tosk or any other of the Albanian dialects.

The village of Datchet, a cluster of ancient buildings The village of Datchet, a cluster of ancient buildings housing a church, a fruiterer and three pubs, was in upper-middle-class country and many of my fellow commuters gave the appearance of being sophisticated, even elegant men. Several, in fact, were fops, dudes, jakes and toffs. But in the dawn's early light we were all reduced to sullen lassitude, depression and fovea. Each commuter looked bleakly upon his neighbors as dolts, oafs, clods and louts and quickly found refusement collined by turningto. The Times' crossword.

refuge and solitude by turning to The Times' crossword.

That was the way it was on all the trains streaming into London at that awful hour. One could only sigh and say to oneself Alas! or Ach! Heu! Och! Oime! or Ohone (Irish)

Until that time I'd never worked a crossword before, much less The Times, which is the most difficult of any. I can truthfully say that I didn't know a candlenut tree — Ama — from an Assam silkworm —Eri.

My mind was not only uncluttered by such words, necessary to plug the vital, missing gaps in the vertical and horizontal maze, but, at that time in the morning, was as weightless as if I'd been in outer space. Little did I dream that it would one day be measured in Lood, Pund, Kunk, Sho, Zak, Pipa, Klam, Tola, Pawa or those other foreign quantitive units which, as one in three of you know, are necessary to complete the thing.

At first there didn't seem to be any reward or ever satisfaction in such an arbitrary exercise. The information thus gained was so useless commercially that it wouldn't pay off in Ullo, the abalone shell money, or Trah, the Mayan

It didn't seem to make any of my fellow commuters at peace with the world, either. Some, in fact, went through such agonles in searching for those obscure key words that one might fancy they were tormented by Dev, Deva or the

A small smile might play on their lips if they'd completed the puzzle before we pulled in to Waterloo, but you could hardly describe it as akin to a revelation from Ebisu, Hotei or the other gods of happiness (Jap.).

My discovery, however, that working the crosswords was a splendid way to begin a day, if she day had to begin at all, was very swift. Before you could say Og, King of Bashan, or Bab, founder of Babism, I was a devotee, a regular ist.

To alight into the fearsome crush of the Big Smoke with the knowledge that I was a man among men who couremember the names of 14 Hindu gods, including Ka, Dew Kama, Rama, Vayu, Bhaga and Vishnu, gave me that little extra lift to do my thing.

It was a great way, too, to delay the realities of the working day and, like my fellow commuters, I found solace in journeying in the abstract to exotic points such as Unga, Kara, Ida, Rash, Yap, Moca, Abo, Etah, Swat, Gozo, Yazoo, Beek, Eem, Iloilo and those places familiar only to the crossword addict, a man who, once hooked, will follow his vice to the end, the finis, limit, tip or Omega.

A quick viewing ... then back home for the birthday feast.

We scouted around among piles of lumber waiting export until we found a place to park, then set a course for the elevator dock. It occurred to me as we skirted rain puddles that a sizeable num-ber of other Victorians were doing the same thing. Pres-ently we rounded a string of box cars and — so much for wishful thinking — joined the lineup in the lee of the freighter's cliff-like grey turn at the gangway came that while plenty were going up, nobody appeared to be getting off. That could mean some slight delay in the birthday dinner. But Win told me not to worry, and wondered if the coat on the sailor above blue cotton lined with unshorn sheepskin — was as warm as it looked.

In a crowd that showed no signs of growing smaller, we tramped hither and yon. We climbed stairs and sidled down metal companionways. In due time we came to officers' country. There we lingered only long enough to note a few chairs in white slipcovers, some very nice panneling inlaid with dark-wood horses, and framed between slogans, a picture of Communist China's leader.

Otherwise, what we saw of Hongqi was starkly utili-tarian. She was no exotic

(At Vancouver, for which port she sails today, she will add a further 4,000 tons. Beetle-free, I trust.) A midships clang-and-clatter attracted our attention. With an officer directing, deckhands were toiling to free a spare gangway from the ironware that secured it.

The bolts resisted wrench and hammer. A specialist arrived with welder's helmet and cuttinng torch.

Meanwhile, a lineup of another sort had begun to form. It consisted of visitors who had been and seen, and now were waiting to disem-

With thoughts of that birthday dinner, we joined it. Nothing happened except more bashing and banging. We shifted from one foot to another in a breeze that had Recently I devoted a column to a question about garter-stitch front borders garter-stitch front borders that are knitted in with the stocking-stitch. They present a problem as the garter-stitch border draws up at the front

The only way to overcome this if the borders are already knitted is to gently steam press them to the required length. Several readers have written in to suggest that working the border in seed or moss-stitch overcomes this problem. This also provides a more attractive front edge.

Dear Adele, For the longest time now I've been hoping someone would come forth and offer advice of a different type than Abby. Perhaps you can do it. I mean mostly manners or are manners dead?

Remember Mrs. Emily Post? I believe she is dead Emily now. Poor woman, she'd turn over in her grave if she could see people's manners now. Yes, even people of her generation. Right here in Victoria it's pathetic.

The poor waitress has an awful time trying to put food on the table, there is just no place — you almost have to push them off with one hand while you quickly put the plate down with the other before they fall back into the same position.

And have you noticed how they use their knife and fork, like a carpenter uses a chisel

And last but not least is the cigarette smoking. I think it should be treated as private bathroom business for one to inhale smoke, take it down to his lungs and then blow it out through his nostrils all over the food. No exceptions to law Ontario employers told

Pakistani women hear freedom call

TORONTO (CP) — The woman in charge of enforcing the new Women's Equal Employment Opportunity Act in Ontario has indicated she will take a hard line toward employers seeking exemption from the act.

Dr. Lita-Rose Betcherman, director of the women's bur-eau for the provincial depart-ment of labor, says exemptions will be granted on an individual basis only.

"Requests for exemptions on the ground that this job has always been done by a man will be looked at with a very cold eye," she told a chapter of the Canadian Industrial Editors' Association.

The act, which comes into force Dec. 1, prohibits disthe basis of sex or marital status and provides for maternity leave for women workers.

Dr. Betcherman said the bureau would grant exemp-tions from the act's provisions in individual cases if a certain woman was not strong enough to do a specific job or if a particular married woman was not mobile enough for a job requiring travelling.

She said, however, that the assumption women are not physically strong enough for many industrial jobs is out-dated. She said many women worked successfully in fac-tories during the Second tories during World War.

A little intrigue with the newest materials and a classic design, and the once difficult fig-ure is simply beautiful. Formfit becomes you. Here's comfort in the "hidden" fibre cushions in the built-up shoulder strap, for support at the shoulder. We chose a fine imported lace to form a cup shape so natural we called it "comfort-design."

It succeeds because of the firm but supple, flat underwire, so well-placed it feels like nothing at all, except sheer comfort. Face your fashions with flair, in the "Romance." In white and nude, sizes 34 to 40.

NEW YORK - If caviar. pe ultimate, quintessential ppetizer of the world, be-omes any more cosfly, it would seem likely that someday cold storage will be installed at Cartier's and Tiffany's.

Whereas 10 years ago those 'pearls of the Caspian' cost in the vicinity of $40 a pound a caviar "pound" is really 14 ounces), the price is now well bast the $60 price tag in some of the more expensive shops in town. One spokesman tated that "we're trying to hold the line, and our price is 62." Elsewhere it is $68 to $62." Elsewhere it is $68 to $70, and one company an-pounces that it sells only the tresh beluga caviar (the finest species of caviar is beluga, although most people wouldn't know it from the smaller grained and slightly less costly sevruga): Their price is $76.

There are several reasons or the doubling in price over the last decade according he last decade, according to 5. F. Hansen-Sturm, chair-nan of the board of the Romanoff Caviar Company, importers and exporters. One the reasons is the Soviet is not, as many suppose, from Russian waters, but from the deeper, Iranian side of the Caspian Sea. Inasmuch as caviar has been, since Czarist days, the great prestige food of Russia, the Russians are a leading competitor for the Iranian product. And, Hansen-Sturm noted, willing to bid formidable sums for the finest caviar, on both the ambassadorial and other levels. The Russians are by no means the sole cause of the elevated prices, however, European e c o n o m y being what it is, competition in the world caviar market is strong and the best-heeled nations (Germany is the leading consumer of caviar in Europe) are apparently almost as competitive as the Russians,

There is also the question of pollution — ecology, if you will. Rivers that flow into any sea are important to the "sweetness" of such bodies of water. That is, the fresh water from inflowing rivers decreases the salinity of seas. Seas that are too salty are not good for sturgeon. Be-cause of the excessive use of water of the Volga building projects, new cities, industrial complexes and so on, the flow of the waters from the Volga into the Caspian has decreased greatly, according to Hansen-Sturm. Thus the level of the Caspian has decreased greatly and continues to do so at an unfortunate rate. As a consequence through normal evaporation, the Caspian is becoming more salty and, Hansen-Sturm explained, may someday, unless something is done, become not a salt sea but a salt lake. Caviar consumers in this country are not the only ones concerned about the problem, of course. There has been serious talk of directing the flow of rivers that now flow into the Arctic into the Volga, and linking the Black Sea with the Caspian. At the the Iranians are "hatchering" the seas with millions "fingerlings," or tiny s tiny sturgeons. The trouble is they won't grow to cavier-produc-tion size for 25 years or so.

Tonight's Top Television Shows TOM JONES, 7 p.m., Channel 6. This will be Tom's final show from Hollywood. It features the Supremes, comic Scoey Mitchell, singer-composer Ray Stevens, who had his own show through the summer, and the Ace Trucking Company improvisational group. The Supremes sing Stoned Love Brother Love and Lovin' Country. Tom sings Cabaret, Try a Little Lenderness and Alone.

JULIA, 7:30 p.m., Channel 2. Julia's romance with Steve progresses, much to the chagrin of little Corey, He's jealous, and the problem of keeping the two men in her life happy becomes almost too much for Julia.

HEADMASTER, 7:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12, CBS realigns its schedule tonight, killing "The Interns" and moving "Headmaster" up an hour to make room for an 8 o'clock movie special. This is mainly a musical offering, combining contemporary and classical sounds. It's done by creating dissension in the Glee Club over student wishes to include rock 'n' roll numbers in the repertoire. You'll enjoy hearing the Los Angeles Eutheran High School Glee Club performing two rock tunes ("Lovin' in My Soul" and "Everybody's Gotta Leave") and the Bach Chorale in C Major,

THE HIGH CHAPARRAL, 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. "The Forge THE HIGH CHAPARRAL. 7:30 p.m., Channel 3. The Forge of Hate" This is an Indian story focusing on an Apache tribe torn by opposing factions. The issue is peace with the white man, with the tribe's bitter chief advocating death to the whites, while one of his more progressive braves is actively trying to integrate the white and red men. The young man moves into the Chaparral Ranch to learn the white ways. But instead of bringing peace, the move causes the belligerent chief to turn his braves loose on the move causes the belligerent chief to turn his braves loose on the

ROWAN AND MARTIN, 8 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Bob Newhart steals most of the scenes tonight, playing an NBC prop man trying to find a partridge and a pear tree, Adam in the Garden of Eden to Ruth Buzzi's Eve, and the president, searching for relatives to visit on a global goodwill tour. All the

THE NAME OF THE GAME, 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. "All the Old Familiar Faces." An excellent concept and a superb cast makes this four-in-one format tough competition for the CBS movie. The premise: A threat on the life of Glenn Howard makes him look up four-scale by the local scale of the control of the contro him look up four people he put in jail, all of whom have a murder motive. The cast: Burgess Meredith is a manufacturer of inferior munitions; Anne Baxter plays an aggressive phony evangelist; Stephen McNally is a four-flushing politician, and Michael Constantine ("Room 222") plays a sadistic nightclub owner.

LOVE, AMERICAN STYLE, 9:30 p.m., Channel 4, John McGiver is the hit of this episode, co-starring with Ann B. Davis ("The Brady Bunch") as the parents of a college student. When they find what appears to be marijuana in his suitease, they decide to give it a try. In the second story, Stu Gilliam's problem is getting an expensive fur coat for his girl friend without his wife finding out. He fails.

BRACKEN'S WORLD. 10 p.m., Channel 5. "The Anonymous Star" Janet Leigh and Ida Lupino contribute to an excellent episode, albeit a bit on the heavy side. Miss Leigh plays a member of Alcoholics Anonymous who leans heavily on Miss Lupino, a constant companion. She is a movie star in the midst of an important production when a crisis causes her to slip, and at a care time when her friend is not available. rare time when her friend is not available.

I recently read a splendid book, "Margaret Sanger, Pioneer Of The Future," written by Emily Taft Douglas, the wife of former Senator Paul Douglas. Margaret Sanger was a great, fearless, and dedicated woman who trained as a nurse, and before the The Future complete with hard are, lights, Camper Top, Speedo, Mechanical steering and sleeper seats . . . POWERED Second World War, started her career as a pioneer in educating the public about birth control. Soon she was arrested, and faced a possible prison term of 45 years. She fled to England where she A MERCURY 100 Motor with Single soon gained the enthusiastic support, friendship and respect of eminent men like Julian and Aldous Huxley, Havelock Ellis, the great sexologist, philosopher Bertrand Russell, and the writer H. ROADRUNNER TRAIL ER, tie downs and Light

> In 1916, Mrs. Sanger opened the first U.S. birth control clinic in the slums of Brooklyn, where she and the clinic were the target of numerous police rais. She was jailed eight times, but she kept fighting for a woman's right to plan her family with birth control, a term that she coined. In 1929, police raided the clinic, arrested the doctors and two nurses, and confiscated 150 case-history records. But by then, a few hundred people came to the support of the cause and persuaded the judge to dismiss the case. He did and the police officers who conducted the raid were reprimanded. Dr. Sanger did a magnificent job helping her fellow-women throughout the world. She helped the women of the Brooklyn control had to have unwanted children for whom there would be little food, clothing, or education, and she helped the women of India, where the birth of more children mean more starvation and death for an already dangerously overtrowded nation. In 1940, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt publicly declared her approval of birth control. Mrs. Sanger retired in 1942, and died in Arizona

Recently, I read that a Gallup Poll, taken early last February, showed that 10 per cent of U.S. women had been so scared by the controversy over the Pill, that they stopped using it, and another 23 per cent were seriously thinking of changing to some other method of contraception. Figures from 17 planned parenthood clinics for the second half of January showed a 16 per cent decline in the number of pill users among new patients; nine per cent of old patients had switched from the pill to some other form of contraceptive device. My own impression is that this scare over the pill was not justified. Men were afraid mainly about possible production of cancer by the female-hormone in the pill. They forgot that every normal woman up to the age of 48 is normally well supplied with female hormone which her body

Conviction, That's the magic word for an actor creating a character—whether it be Indian, cowboy, duchess or Roman slave.

We who are onlookers must have our illusion of truth. We must believe for a little while because if we do not there is no object to the exercise. Without belief there can be no response in terms of eme Thursday night at the Phoenix Theatre I believed intensely quite often during the couple of hours spent watching Arthur Kopit's Indians brought to life on the University of Victoria stage The play, in two acts and 13 scenes, is a scathing satire on the white man's actions that despoiled, fooled, cheated, mocked and humiliated the North American aboriginals.

Told in terms of a Wild West Show, it rips the gaudy flesh away, exposing the corrupt bones, rotten with greed and callous chicanery.

The distorted perspective of designer Robert Cothran's chequerboard stage seems to echo the distortion of Kopit's concept that makes the dians entirely noble, childishly simple, courageous annd hon orable pawns to the white man's wholly insensate cheating hands.

BLACK WHITE MEN-

But we accept the premise momentarily that, to convey the playwright's message, there were no corrupt, conniving or cowardly Indians and none but black-hearted white players, four of the student actors impressed me and of these four, two especially. Gene Miller as Sitting Bull was a figure of splendid dignity. One was aware of his sorrow, of the fact that he had suffered unendurable humiliation - that bent earth with woe he yet stood tall among men.

At all times when Miller was on stage he was a hyphotic figure, dwarfing

William Murdoch created a vivid personality, strong and passionate as the Indian, John Grass. The characterization was as firm and undeviating as though it had been carved from granite, yet it throbbed with life.

David Burke's savage Geronimo and Don MacLean's Chief Joseph were also excellent studies well sustained.
The extremely difficult role of Buffalo Bill — revealed as a vascilating, cowardly showoff - did not entirely con vince me as D. G. Lander presented it.

The actor seemed to slip out of character every now and then to become just tha an actor on the stage looking for a foothold.

Vocally he was a bit worrisome too, for at times his speech raced and words became a blur; he was inclined to blurt and then to fall into a drawing-room conversational tone.

Smaller parts that came off ald church into a hostel received well were created by N. C. P. approval in principle at a Whitehouse convincing as Wild Bill Hickock and Gary Pogrow as an old-time presi-

A good musical score by Christine Chester backs the interesting play which is competent perceptive direction of John Krich.

Emergency Debate Probes Actions of Government

QUEBEC (CP) — Why has the Quebec government acted the way it has since the beginning of the unprecedented crisis now gripping the province?

The question is the subject of an emergency debate which has been going on in the Quebec na-tional assembly since Wednesday, but so far Premier Robert Bourassa has not given out all the information the skeptics want.

The 37-year-old premier, prod-ded into anger by Parti Quebe-cols-criticism of his Liberal gov-ernment's actions, delivered a 71-minute speech Thursday to justify what his government has done since Oct. 5, when British diplomat James Cross was kid-was that Lucien Saulnier, for-

Canadian Infant Deaths

LONDON (CP) - The Lancet, a British medical journal, refers to research which indicates that the incidence of sudden deaths in infants is greater in more northerly areas of Canada than in the country's southern regions.

HOME GARDEN

One Method of Anchoring Soil

By HILDA BEASTALL

On an island of rocks with Christmas trees originally climbing up their slopes, civilization is bound to reduce the bare unsightly banks inhospitable to cultivated . We find much of this kind of ground as building lots become scarce near the towns and cities on Vancouver Island. Stone walls are often built out of native rock to retain the base of the slope. Then comes the problem of preventing the gravelly soil gradually washing downwards over the wall.

One successful treatment to be seen locally is at the McKenzie Avenue Motor Vehicle Inspection Station.

As you drive into the lanes, spare a glance for the sloping bank on your left.

Surmounting the entire length of the slope is a splendid planting of Pampas-grass, their plumes shining and waving against the skyline

Since these love sunshine, plenty of space and good drainage they should require little care for several years beyond removal of the plumes when they are withered.

But it is the slope below the Pampas down to the retaining wall which holds a visual lesson for gardeners with even small problem slopes.

Most of us are inclined to plant an assortment of precious and not-so-precious plants on a garden slope, resulting in a jumble never wholly satisfactory and always needing attention.

If we have the time and inclination, we can change the plants every year or two, but this system does not assist in permanently anchoring the soil on the sloping bank. Only a tight root system, with a complete foliage cover over the soil will do this, and only time will achieve this objective.

At the Inspection Station a ground cover of the lowgrowing Hypericum cal, cinum was set out two years ago last spring. Now the plants have grown together making a complete mat of stems and leaves about 12 inches tall.

complete mat of stems and leaves about 12 inches tall.

This is the plant sometimes called St. John's-wort and sometimes known as Rose-of-Sharon. From early summer until fall, large butter yellow flowers spread over the whole planting. Now the flowers are gone, but the leaves will remain quite presentable all winter.

In a small garden area, this plant must be watched for its invasive habit of rooting which is desirable on a large steep bank. A pair of shears taken to the plants in early April will hasten growth from the lower stems but its not so

Relative peace in the B.C. construction industry this winter will be little comfort r many tradesmen and illding contractors who will be without work.

Dissident Russians Sent to Prison

Amairik, dissident historian and penetrating critic of the Soviet system, was sentenced to three years in prison camp under restrictive regime at his trial in Sverdlovsk Thursday, dissident sources

His co-defendant, Lev Ubozhko, was sentenced to three years in camp under general regime.

There are four types of regime in Soviet camps. General is the least severe and restrictive the next most severe, with two even harsher, three years under general regime for both defendants. The judge increased Amalrik's penzity, an unusual but not unheard-of occurrence in Soviet courts.

Both men were charged ith "disseminating falsehoods derogatory to the Soviet

4 Men, Woman Face Charges Under War Act

MONTREAL (CP) - Four men and one woman were arraigned today on charges stemming from emergency regulations under the War Measures Act, Gerard Pelletier, Jocelyne Despatie and Pierre Bourret Despatie and Pierre Bourret: were each charged with seditious conspiracy and with being or declaring to be a member of the Front de Liberation du Quebec, outlawed Oct. 16 with proclamation of the act.

Jean-Jacques Leroux and Daniel Seguin were charged with advocating the aims of the violently-separatist FLQ, which wants Quebec independence from the rest of Canada.

In addition, Leroux was charged with being a member of the FLQ.

Bennett Hints Higher Taxes In Next Year

By BRUCE YEMEN Times Staff

Vancouver - Premier Bennett today forewarned the province of "temporarily unpopular" measures to be introduced at the next legislative session.

It was the strongest indica tion to date that new or higher taxes — or both — will be imposed on B.C. residents. Bennett told the party's annual convention at the Bayshore Inn that B.C. has weathered the most difficult year of the past two decades 'surprisingly well."

NEW GROUND

He predicted a new period of prosperity "that we never even thought about in the 1960s" and added; "So in the coming session, we will be breaking new ground. Some of our measures will be popular and some will possibly be

Canada Takes Middle Road In China Debate

UNITED NATIONS (CP) - Canada said today it supports the admission of Communist China to the 127-member world organization as soon as it is clear that such a step is the wish of a "significant proportion of the membership."

The announcement was made in the General Assembly in a brief speech by Canadian Ambassador Yvon Beaulne that said little, that could be considered as a sales pitch for Communist membership.

Beaulne, speaking on the second day of the annual China debate, said Canada will support the Albanian resolution calling for the admission of the Communist Chinese and expulsion of the Nationalists.

And he said that Canada will continue past practice of supporting the Americansponsored resolution that says admission of China is an important question requiring two-thirds majority for passage.

U.S. VIEW CHANGED

Earlier the United States stole the thunder in the debate Thursday by coming close to advocating a two-China policy for the UN—the seating of both the National-ists and the Communists.

Am bassador Christopher Phillips delivered a speech that contained not one word of criticism of the Communist Chinese and concentrated on the American claim that the expulsion of Nationalist China would violate "the principles of equity and justice." Instead of implying, as have past U.S. speeches in this annual debate, that the Communists are not ready for membership because of the Continued on Page 2

Cellist Defends Outcast Novelist

By ANTHONY ASTRACHAN

MOSCOW (WP) vorld-famous cellist Mstislav Rostropovich defended the great but outcast novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn Thursday against press attacks on his works and on the Nobel Prize he has been awarded.

In an open letter to the editors of four Soviet news-papers, Rostropovich de-scribed Soviet cultural authorities as "often absolutely incompetent" and drew par-allels between current cul-tural restrictions and those of the Stalin years. Rostropovich, 43, is one of

'Incurable' Disease Treated

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) Scientists at St. Jude's Children's Hospital say they are optimistic about the potential of a treatment they have eloped for acute lymphocytic leukemia. Hospital officials said Thursday that their treatment, a combination of drugs and radiation, has resulted in a five-year remission rate of 17 per cent.

Remission is temporary abatement of symptoms of the disease

They said they believe the disease, which affects up to 14,000 children in the United States each year, no longer can be considered incurable.

If a disease can be made to disappear for five years physicians usually term it cured, Previously a one-per-cent re-mission rate of lymphocytic leukemia was the best medical science had achieved, Joseph Simone cautioned that the treatment is risky and can cause bad side effects. He said 41 children have been treated and of those seven have remained free from all signs of leukemia for five years and have been removed from medication,

In a later group, half the children treated remain free of the disease after 2½ yars. Scientific reports on the treatment have been accepted for publication in the Journal the American Medical Association and the Journal of the American Cancer Society. Such acceptance is tanta mount to official recognition. Development of the new procedure began in 1962 at St. Jude under Dr. Donald Pin-

DUNCAN - Cowighan Valley regional board is consider-ing three bylaws to control development in the Cowichan Bay and Cobble Hill areas. Directors said Thursday the bylaws, which were devised after a planning study carried out by planner John Northey, the regional board and planning commissions In the affected areas, will deal with zoning subdivision and development control and building. Public hearings will be held to outline the proposed plan-ning bylaws which were requested by many residents.

Director Bruce Devitt from Glenora, who requested a similar planning study, was advised that the Cobble Hill-Cowichan Bay study would be applicable in many instances n his area.

The board wants to see more unorganized areas within the regional district ask for similar studies. *

Director H. A. Warner of Mill Bay said that the people of his district should have a chance to look at copies of the proposed bylaws before any decision is made.

Acting chairman Ken Mc-Kinnon of Cowlehan Bay replied that making decisions was one of the jobs expected of regional directors.

Although Mill Bay is not directly affected by the plan-ning, all directors will have to vote on the three bylaws. Public hearings will be held to outline the planning.

NO MEDIATION, ARBITRATION NEEDED

Teachers, Board Agree on Salaries

For the first time in eight years salary negotiations between Cowi-chan school board and its teachers have been reached without going to mediation or arbitration.

Secretary-treasurer G. F. Dyson said teachers will receive an increase of about $650 a year.

Board officials said the increase is about the provincial average for the current round of negotiations.

Included in the new con-tract, signed Thursday are a number of features designed to effect improvements learning conditions and to provide increased security, on a voluntary contribution basis, for teachers incapaci-tated through illness or accident.

It is specified "the implementation of this contract shall bind both parties to make every effort to improve the teaching-learning situation in Cowichan school district.

WORDS, WORDS

Down and Across With the Addicts

By Jack Scott

It's not that I'm disloyal, you understand, but I was secretly delighted by the results of the massive foul-up of last weekend's giant crossword puzzle in the paper, a boo-boo of such magnitude that I spent almost an entire Sunday on it, convinced that it was a diabolical new test of our

What pleased me was the tremendous response of readers and, checking this with our circulation manager, Stewart Kidd, I was astonished to find that the last survey showed one in every three Times' subscribers was a "regular" or "occasional" addict, a figure that, on a per capita basis, might well make Victoria the Crossword Puzzle Capital of

This gives me yet another comforting feeling of identity vith my adopted town since I've been a slave, esne or Helot (Spartan) to crosswords for many long years.

I first became hooked on them as a correspondent in Britain when we took a place on the Thames, a 40-minute train trip to my office in London. The notion then occurred to me that I might make myself the best informed man in Buckinghamshire by reading The Times from front to back during my commuting. If I'd succeeded, of course, I'd have been a very wise man. Indeed, I'd have been a sage, solon, nestor, a have been a sage, solon, nestor, a veritable Magi, Gaspar, Balthasar or Trouble was, I'd never been accustomed to getting up so early in the morning and, arriving at the station in Datchet for the 7.28 I was usually in the sort of torpor associated with the Ai, the three-toed sloth, or even the Unau, the two-toed sloth.

The other commuters, most of them City businessmen Xeroxed under black bowlers, were no more lively and gave every appearance of having just emerged from Aala, the Egyptian abode of the dead.

True to the British railway tradition, there was no more direct communication between the passengers than would have been expected had our mother tongues been Geg, Cham, Tosk or any other of the Albanian dialects.

The village of Datchet, a cluster of ancient buildings housing a church, a fruiterer and three pubs, was in upper-middle-class country and many of my fellow commuters gave the appearance of heing sophisticated, even elegant men. Several, in fact, were fops, dudes, jakes and toffs. But in the dawn's early light-we were all reduced to sullen lassitude, depression and fovea. Each commuter looked bleakly upon his neighbors as dolts, oafs, clods and louts and quickly found refuge and solitude by turning to The Times' crossword.

That was the way it was on all the trains streaming into London at that awful hour. One could only sigh and say to neself Alas! or Ach! Heu! Och! Oime! or Ohone (Irish)!

Until that time I'd never worked a crossword before, much less The Times, which is the most difficult of any. I can truthfully say that I didn't know a candlenut tree — Amafrom an Assam silkworm - Eri.

My mind was not only uncluttered by such words, so necessary to plug the vital, missing gaps in the vertical and horizontal maze, but, at that time in the morning, was as weightless as if I'd been in outer space. Little did I dream that it would one day be measured in Lood, Pund, Kunk, Sho, Zak, Pipa, Klam, Tola, Pawa or those other foreign quantitive units which, as one in three of you know, are necessary to complete the thing.

At first there didn't seem to be any reward or even satisfaction in such an arbitrary exercise. The information thus gained was so useless commercially that it wouldn't pay off in Ulló, the abalone shell money, or Trah, the Mayan pewter currency.

It didn't seem to make any of my fellow commuters at peace with the world, either. Some, in fact, went through such agonies in searching for those obscure key words that one might fancy they were tormented by Dev, Deva or the other Zoroastrian demons.

A small smile might play on their lips if they'd completed hardly describe it as akin to a revelation from Ebisu, Hotei or the other gods of happiness (Jap.).

My discovery, however, that working the crosswords was splendid way to begin a day, if the day had to begin at all, s very swift. Before you could say Og, King of Bashan, or Bab, founder of Babism, I was a devotee, a regular ist.

To alight into the fearsome crush of the Big Smoke with the knowledge that I was a man among men who could remember the names of 14 Hindu gods, including Ka, Dewa, Kama, Rama, Vayu, Bhaga and Vishnu, gave me that little extra lift to do my thing.

If was a great way, too, to delay the realities of the working day and, like my fellow commuters, I found solace in journeying in the abstract to exotic points such as Unga, Kara, Ida, Raab, Yap, Moca, Abo, Etah, Swat, Gozo, Yazoo, Beek, Eem, Iloilo and those places familiar only to the crossword addict, a man who, once hooked, we to the end, the finis, limit, tip or Omega.

Engineers Expect Strike Settlement

Representatives of striking stationary engineers at B.C. hospitals were expected to give approval today to a tentative

"I feel confident it will be accepted," Ed Callan, international representative of the International Union of Operating Engineers, said this morning.

The labor relations council of the B.C. Hospitals Association will meet Monday to make its decision. No details were released by either side. The dispute centred on hours of work and wages.

Sixteen hospitals were hit by strikes which began last Monday, including Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's in Victoria. The strikes could have spread to 28 hospitals where steam plant engineers work.

The tentative settlement was reached after negotiations Wednesday and Thursday and averted a hazard with some hospitals reported very low on fuel.
"We have given permission for them (fuel delivery trucks) to take in one-week supplies of oil to see these hospitals over until Monday at least," said Callan.

Provide Water for Fish' City Ordered by Minister

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis has "insisted" the provide sufficient water all year round for the survival of salmon in Goldstream.

In a strongly-worded letter to Mayor Courtney Haddock, the minister said the Greater Victoria Water Board must start planning to provide a minimum flow of water for fry and spawning salmon.

The request is tantamount to an order.

The letter is dated Nov. 4. the day water commissioner Ron Upward announced that water would be released Sunday, Nov. 8, into the nearly dry stream.

The minister's request was backed with a warning that under the 102-year-old Fisheries Act, part 10; section 120, owners of dams or persons responsible for altering natural flow of streams, must provide sufficient water for "This minimum flow must take priority over other uses," he said.

He made it clear he ex-pected the water board to plan for the future needs of "I must insist that you do so in the future," he stated.

Haddock refused to provide a copy of his letter from Davis but made the following "Mr Davis' belated interest while reassuring comes as a complete surprise to me in the light of his apparent lack of concern when he failed to respond to my attempts to get in touch with him at the time of the crisis. "I am happy to say, however, that we dealt with the problem at the local level without his assistance.

Victoria Nobody minded. Victoria crowds, I've noticed in many a lineup, are both patient and cheerful. The couple ahead of us lifted their two young ones to their shoulders. We moved ahad a few more paces in a mild spatter of rain

It occured to me as our turn at the gangway came that while plenty were going up, nobody appeared to be getting off. That could mean some slight delay in the birthday dinner. Dissident Russians Sent to Prison

Amalrik, dissident historian and penetrating critic of the Soviet system, was sentenced to three years in prison camp under restrictive regime at his trial in Sverdlovsk Thursday, dissident sources

His co-defendant, Lev Ubozhko, was sentenced to three years in camp under general regime.

There are tour types of egime in Soviet eamps. regime General is the least severe and restrictive the next most severe, with two even tiree years under general regime for both defendants. The judge increased Amalrik's penzity, an unusual but not unheard-of occurrence in Soviet courts.

Both men were charged with "disseminating false-hoods derogatory to the Soviet state and social system.'

They did not know each other before. Ubozhko was charged with bringing two documents to Sverdlovsk. One was a copy of an open letter that Amalrik wrote to Anatoly Kuznetsov, the Soviet writer who defected to Britain last which he predicts the disinte-; hence the link between defendants. The other document was a leaflet dis-tributed by two young Italians at a demonstration at the TSUM department store in January, demanding the liberation of Maj. Gen. Canada Takes Middle Road In China Debate announcement made in the General Assem-bly in a brief speech by Canadian Ambassador Yvon Beaulne that said little that could be considered as a sales pitch for Communist membership.

Beaulne, speaking on the second day of the annual China debate, said Canada will support the Albanian resolution calling for the admission of the Communist Chinese and expulsion of the Nationalists,

And he said that Canada will continue past practice of supporting the American-sponsored resolution that says admission of China is an important question requiring two-thirds majority for passage.

U.S. VIEW CHANGED

Earlier the United States stole the thunder in the debate Thursday by coming close to advocating a two-China policy for the UN—the seating of both the Nationalists and the Communists,

Am bassador Christopher Phillips delivered a speech that contained not one word of criticism of the Communist Chinese and concentrated on the American claim that the expulsion of Nationalist China would violate "the principles of equity and justice."
